This compilation of essays explores the experiences of women in Catholicism from before the Second Vatican Council through the late 1990s. It aims to reveal the diversity of the experience of women in Catholic history, and to open an account of the cultural representations of Catholicism that have contributed to this diversity. It is an attempt at both to reconfigure both the representation of 'Catholic women' and the role women have played in different periods, especially through their role as religious, as well as the way women have figured in the literature of Catholicism. Rosalind Hughes is Professor of Religious Studies at the University of St Andrews.
