I tried to use #include instead of #include , but it still doesn't work. A: It looks like you are trying to compile a C++ program into C. Turn on language C++11 mode (see the GNU manual for that) and you should be able to get rid of the errors. Q: VMWare convert from Mac OS X to Windows XP I have a Mac 10.4.8 with VMWare Fusion 4.0.5, and I want to convert it into Windows XP for my niece. She's very familiar with the Mac, but not Windows. The problem is that I can't upgrade the VMWare so that it can run Windows XP. It works fine on Mac OS X, but

It works well, but unfortunately there is no option for passing the time as milliseconds. I would have no problem with setting the date like this: const d = new Date(); d.setYear('2015'); d.setMonth('8'); d.setDate('12'); d.setHours(17); d.setMinutes(13); d.setSeconds(23); d.setMilliseconds(0); But I have no idea how to pass milliseconds as year. This is how I use the class, without having any problems: const d = new Date(); d.setTimezone(2); d.setFullYear(2015); d.setMonth(9); d.setDate(12); d.setHours(17); 3da54e8ca3
